Some majors at San Diego State University have more students wanting to declare that major than can be accommodated. As such, they are designated as impacted majors. All students who are admitted to SDSU and want to declare an impacted major are placed in a pre-major.

All pre-majors must meet department-specific criteria to move from the pre-major to the major, such as a specified minimum grade point average, completion of prerequisite courses, tests, and completion of a certain number of units.
